

Marble Italia™

Marble Italia combines and simplifies the process of obtaining Italian marble and porphyry for design and construction around the world.

Based in London, we own a marble quarry in the north Italian alps and co-operate with a group of selected Italian quarry owners to source the highest quality stone for your project - or for the international block and slab market. The flexibility of marble and porphyry, along with their upmarket appeal, puts them in constant demand.

Through a direct link between quarries, marble workers and clients, we are able to reduce the time and costs associated with quickly acquiring the stone.

Architects and designers are always searching for the right materials to emphasise and embolden their projects. The versatility of marble makes it ideal for such a role, with a piece of specifically finished rock fitting seamlessly in to both modern and traditional designs.

Marble quarry

Working with celebrated Italian quarries, we co-operate with technicians and marble quarry owners to source the highest quality natural stone. Once the blocks are mined you can choose to receive the raw material for trading, or send it on to our stoneworkers to be shaped.

Manufacturing process

The process of moulding marble for construction and design is a skill practised by seasoned artisans. Applying years of experience, these craftsmen cut and form blocks into fine slabs or specific shaped products, reflecting the opulence traditionally associated with Italian marble. Popular for interior and exterior building design, our marbles are also a fine investment for trade.

Finished product

Marble and porphyry are versatile materials used by architects and builders in both modern and traditional construction.

In our workshops we can shape the rock for any project, with popular uses including: staircases, bathrooms, flooring, paving, walls, kitchen tops and building facades.
